I am a husband, a father, a grandfather, a friend, a trial lawyer and native son of the Puget Sound area. My father was a Psychologist for the United States Army. My mother was a Social Worker for the Red Cross. By 1962, my father was offered a teaching position in Psychology at the University of Washington so we packed up and moved to Seattle, Washington. My father had a sabbatical from the University of Washington in which he taught students in foreign countries. I had the opportunity to live a year in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia in 1967 and London, England in 1973 – gaining some valuable experience in humanity and diversity. I made it back to Seattle to graduate from Shorecrest High School in 1975.

Today, I am a lawyer in Tacoma, Washington specializing in Workers' Compensation and Personal Injury Law. I have a Juris Doctorate from the University of Puget Sound (1984) and after passing the Bar Exam on my first try, was admitted to practice in November of 1984. I also graduated from the Gerry Spence Trial Lawyers College, and have a B.A. in History from the University of Washington.

I have lived here and worked out of my own law office ever since.

I have the highest possible rating on the Avvo.com website, am a member of the American Board of Trial Advocates (ABOTA), and am also listed with Super Lawyers for 2010 through 2014.

Chances are that I have worked with or know the reputation of your adjuster, claims manager, vocational rehabilitation counselor, and physicians. In my twenty-plus years of practice as a self-employed attorney (January 1986 to the present), I have represented thousands of individuals who have been injured at work and/or due to the negligence of other parties; I have handled innumerable jury trials, appeals, and administrative hearings.

I also represented my clients, as a courtesy, in criminal courts and with their Social Security disability claims and helps the Public Defender by handling a couple of cases a year for them.

I have been involved with several community boards and taught pre-trial advocacy as an Adjunct Professor of Law at Seattle University's School of Law (1999-2004).

I enjoy teaching and that has been a part of my career. For the past few years, I have also been on staff with Steve Fury and his Trial Skills Academy. This is a one per month, nine-month program to give young lawyers some trial experience. I have spoken at many different CLE's (Continuing Legal Education seminars) over the years.

For the past eight years, I have taught at the Bob Dawson Trial Workshop. This is a four-day event with thirty students/lawyers, and two instructors, Bob Dawson and myself. To find out more about how I can help you when you have been hurt at work or injured because of someone's wrongful actions, contact me today.

Atticus Goes to Class

I am the co-founder of the WSAJ (Washington State Association for Justice) Atticus Goes to School Program. Lawyers attend a school anywhere from elementary school to high school, to inspire students to enter the legal profession and to educate future voters and jurors. Lawyers have the opportunity to earn CLE credits as well.

Personally, I have completed over 25 speaking engagements within this program.
